

TRUSTEES STANDING FOR RE-ELECTION

Keeley Hazelhurst – Honorary Treasurer

It has been my honour to have been with the Trust since 2016 as Honorary Treasurer and trustee.

I currently run my own consultancy and accounting business from North Essex, working with small and medium sized businesses along with local and international charities. I am a qualified accountant with over 25 years' experience in the private and charity sectors. I have been fortunate to work as a magistrate, trustee and founder member a variety of charities and community groups.

I worry greatly about the impact we have on our environment, the future for our children and the disregard that our 'leaders' have for the planet we live on. I am a strong believer in holding people to account and standing up for what you believe in. I believe that EWT is a great advocate for our environment, that it takes action where necessary and protects our wildlife for the future. I am very proud to be a small part of this inspirational team.

" As a relative newcomer to both Essex, and The Essex Wildlife Trust, having moved to the county from London in 2015, I was appointed to the EWT board of trustees in January 2017. I feel enormously privileged and proud to be given the opportunity to serve the trust, and to help protect the unique habitat and wildlife of my adopted county. I have recently been appointed to the Marketing & Development Committee of The Wildlife Trusts.

My professional background and expertise are in brand, media, marketing and social media in the book publishing industry, working across both the UK and global markets. After 16 years as Creative Director for Pan Macmillan publishers, I set-up my own brand agency in July 2018, and my current projects include working with Elton John, Jeffrey Archer and Peter James. I won the 2012 British Book Award for Marketing for my work on Room by Emma Donoghue.

I love the Essex landscape, and particularly our beautiful maritime environment, and as a passionate photographer I look forward to visiting all of our reserves and meeting our brilliant wardens who do such amazing work."

Charles Joynson

As a child in at a school in rural Sussex, I would regularly escape to explore the forests around the school.

Later as a youth I worked in conservation projects in the Mendips and Peak District, building paths, walls, steps, ponds, as well as coppicing, hedge-laying and rhododendron bashing, all the while exploring our natural world and recognising its value.

Since then I have gained degrees in geology and business, and spent most of my professional life working in the life sciences industry.

In 2000 I set up my own data and informatics consultancy, became a long term corporate EWT member, and have polished my skills in sales, marketing, IT and business research.

My reason for wanting to be on the EWT board is that I am extremely concerned at the rate at which our wildlife is vanishing and am determined to do something about it.

In my spare time I write about extinction and why we should save wildlife.

I believe it is critically important to preserve our reserves as biodiversity hotspots for three reasons: 1. As reserves and their wildlife are wonderful, beautiful and give us so much pleasure in their existence, 2. As the species in them are part of our ecosystem and help to keep us alive (think bees), and 3. So that once human populations start to drop after 2200, our descendants can help our wildlife to spread out from the reserves we are fighting to protect and to the rest of Essex, England and the world.
